

I am writing to voice the strongest possible opposition to the CBA's petition seeking to weaken Indiana's "No Call" law. As formulated, the requested "established business relationship" exemption effectively destroys the legislation. These banking institutions have consistently demonstrated no regard for individual privacy. Before the current legislation they were responsible for some of the most abusive practices including continuing multiple contacts after being asked not to do so as well as phoning during mealtimes and the early morning. Please reject the petition.
